Gustave Theilkuhl Oreates Excitement in the Police Court.

Trouble Again.

Gustave Theilkuhl, who attempted suicide, and was adjudged insane, was treated in the government asylum for the insane and was discharged as cured. But today when he appeared in the Police Court he gave renewed evidences of a return of mental disorder, and had he not been restrained Wm. E. Wilson, who had him arrested, would have fared badly at the hands of the infuriated man. Theilkuhl, who is a well-known citizen here, first showed eviwell-known citizen here, first showed evidences of mental trouble in the latter part of November, 1891, about which time one of his children died. He had formed an attachment for the child, and when death removed from this world the one he loved the shipping, for their rates were much lower than those of the river and to shipping. removed from this world the one he loved so well the affliction was more than he could bear. Following the interment of the child he spent a great part of his time about the grave. One afternoon, just as the sun had set, he rested himself beside the last resting place of the dead one, and then attempted self-destruction by using a pistol. The report of the pistol shot was Bailiff Botts and a number of police officers grabbed the prisoner and prevented him from doing injury to Wilson. He was then rushed out of the court room and taken back to the cell.

Judge Miller said that there was no lareny in the case, and wanted to know of Wilson why he resorted to the criminal process in the matter.

"The next time you want to locate property in this way," said the judge, "you had better resort to the civil court or consult the prosecuting attorney. This has brought on the defendant's trouble again, and may result in permanent injury to The case was dismissed.

"It is mournful to listen to the tales of woe of the old Mississippi men on the decadence of shipping the railroads began to creep along the great river's shores from New Orleans to pelled to submit to the installation and encroachments of the iron horse precisely as the lumbering old stage coach as the lumbering old stage coach was obliged to give way early in the century. In fact, it is idle for the steamboat men of the Mississippi to attempt to resist the irresistible invasion of the railroads by ruthlessiy slaughtering rates and freighting at a loss, or by any other means. For instance, there is a railroad from Dubuque to St. Paul on each side of the river Path then attempted self-destruction by using a pistol. The report of the pistol shot was heard, and later the wounded man was found by one of the men in charge of the cemetery.

On the 5th day of December, 1891, he was tried by a marshal's jury and adjudged insane. Then he was committed to St. Elizabeth's Asylum, from where he was discharged on the 24th of the following May as cured.

Since that time Thelikuhl has appeared perfectly sane. He recently accepted a position from William E. Wilson of No. 418 6th street northwest, but he soon left the place and carried away a photographer's lense belonging to Wilson, leaving a note at the place informing Mr. Wilson that he could get the instrument upon payment of what was due him.
